Introduction

The basic objective of College of Finance and Economics is to train students to meet present human resource needs in Taiwan. To fulfill these requirements, College of Finance and Economics has offered several major subjects of study including the Graduate Institute of Finance, Graduate Institute of Financial and Economic Law, Graduate Institute of Public Finance and Accounting, Department of Finance, Department of Finance and Risk Management, Department of Accounting and Information Technology, Department of Public Finance and Specialized Practice & License Training Center for providing four-year undergraduate and night programs. College of Finance and Economics also offers two MBA programs, including a major in Finance, and Financial and Economic Law, and one EMBA program for those who intend to pursue further studies in their academic career.

Features

- Theory and practice: In curriculum planning, we focus on theory and practice, which enables students to apply both in their future careers.
- National economic development and local industrial development: We strive to cultivate expertise and to specialize in satisfying the needs in both national economic development and local industrial development.
- Teaching and research: In our teaching, we strive to deliver knowledge and skills in finance related areas. In research, we cooperate with other schools within Ling Tung University to explore cross-profession areas.
- Continuing education and community service: We cooperate with the Continuing Education Center to provide services and education to our communities and business entities. Through these services, students can learn to care for people and apply their knowledge in practice.
- General and professional education: We provide both general education and professional education. We also provide workshops and conferences in liberal arts, finance and ethics.

Future Development

- Recruit faculty members with doctoral, degrees to improve teaching and research.
- Provide cutting-edge courses in the area of finance, foreign language, and information technology.
- Increase cooperation with business entities, and link theory with practice.

Future Goals
The School will equip students with expertise in finance and legal areas to meet the needs of national economic and business developments.

The school will broaden the global view of students and faculty by increasing international academic activities with universities all over the world, especially with universities in Mainland China.

The school will strive to maintain alumni with latest trends by providing lifelong learning opportunities.

Further Studies

- Graduates can apply for the master’s programs in economics, business, finance, financial and economic law, international trade, banking and insurance, business management, and accounting.
- Graduates can also apply for Master’s and Ph.D. degrees abroad.

Future Career

- Graduates can find finance-related jobs in government by passing Economy and International Officers Examination, Finance Officers Examination, Finance and Tax Officers Examination, and Justiciary and Attorney and Secretary Officers Examination.
- Graduates can find jobs in finance and related business and legal areas in private business entities.